Important Announcement To the Legal Profession

Ruling Case Law Will Probably Fill 30 Volumes.
The Present Guaranty That the Number Will Not Exceed 27 Volumes Expires June 30, 1916.

IT is your interest, as an inevitable owner of Ruling Case Law, rather than good business from a commercial view point, which inspires this notice. It tells a story that any lawyer who buys books will do well to heed. When

Ruling Case Law

Was first announced it was expected that the work could be completed in twenty-five volumes of about twelve hundred pages each. Early subscribers for their prompt support of the undertaking received a guaranty that all volumes in excess of that number would be furnished free.

As the editorial work progressed, however, it was soon realized that the wealth of material to be found in the great annotated cases had been underestimated. Although

Guaranty Raised
3 Vols.

the size of the volumes was materially increased it appeared that twenty-seven volumes would be necessary to cover all titles adequately. The twenty-five-volume guaranty, after notice given, was therefore withdrawn and only contracts calling for twenty-seven volumes have since been accepted.

Further editorial progress shows that this second estimate is too low if the present style, which emphasizes reasons, traces the source and development of the law, and discusses principles,—a text which has made “R. C. L.” unique among law books,— is to be maintained. It goes without saying that the publishers and editors determined not to sacrifice completeness to any commercial need for condensation.

SAVE

$19.50

The number of volumes, therefore, must again be increased. Probably thirty volumes (including the index volume) will be required to finish the work. After June 30, 1916, the guaranty in all subscription contracts will be placed at that number.

We make this announcement weeks in advance in order that those who have received the previous offers of a twenty-seven volume guaranty, and who have made up their minds to subscribe, will be in no position to complain when $19.50 is added to the price of a full set.

Write to-day, however, for special 27 volume guaranty contract as designated on coupon below which will protect your interests in the meantime.

PROTECTIVE COUPON

The Lawyers Co-op. Pub. Co., Rochester, N. Y.

As per your official announcement send me a contract under your special 27 volume guaranty and in the meanwhile enter my name as subscriber to protect my interests. This does not bind me, however, until I have signed the regular contract.

KEEPING PACE

The Automobile and L. R. A.

When a lawyer enters his subscription to the current volumes of the Lawyers Reports Annotated, he knows that his library, however small or large it may be, is going to be kept up to date. The new principles developed and the new applications of old principles will be reflected in L.R.A., supplementing all his textbooks, Digests, and Reports.

Automobile Law illustrates this, as it is a distinctive modern development and is almost contemporaneous with L.R.A. New Series, which was begun in 1906, the point at which the lawyers of the country last had an opportunity to begin an L.R.A. subscription with a single volume purchase. The several thousand lawyers who began their subscription at that time now have a wonderful library of modern law.

Below is shown a list of the volumes and pages where may be found L.R.A. annotations to current cases from 1906 down to 1916. In other words, right down to the regulation of the jitney bus.

WITH THE LAW

Flexibility of L. R. A.

This list perfectly illustrates the flexibility of the L.R.A. plan which so readily adapts itself to the changing conditions of the law. L.R.A. is a system of units; the whole constitutes one complete unity, and so are all of its several parts complete units as to the period covered by them. Whether you subscribe for the 1916 volumes alone, or whether you buy at the same time the volumes for 1915, or the volumes from 1906 to 1915, constituting the New Series, or the volumes from 1888 to 1906, constituting the first seventy volumes, you have in any case a complete working unit for the period covered.

Forecast the Future by the Past

You are taking nothing for granted or on faith when you subscribe to L.R.A. Look back on the history of the set and you cannot fail to see the advantage to you of entering subscription, regardless as to whether you buy any back volumes at the present time or not. Of course, you would not expect a working library in one or two volumes, but what an inexpensive way it is to keep your whole library complete and yourself abreast of the onward progress of the law.

Index to Notes

By entering subscription for 1916 and buying the Index to All the Law in L.R.A. (1800 pages) together with the 1915 Index, you have at your command, through the aid of complete sets of L.R.A. which are accessible in almost every town and city of the United States, the entire wealth of annotation for the twenty-eight years. This is the time to act.
